	A college football player who looked headed toward a future as an NFL player, the course of Alphonso Grant's life changed when his mother Megan and younger sister Janelle were killed during a terrorist attack on the government building where Megan worked. Alphonso opted to forgo a chance at an NFL career to enlist in the Army. A gifted athlete with a sharp mind, Alphonso qualified for Army Ranger training. Following training and a short deployment in Afghanistan, Alphonso was recruited into GI Joe, where he would subsequently learn that the attack that killed his mother and sister was in fact a Cobra operation. Though relatively early in his GI Joe career, Alphonso has dedicated himself to stopping Cobra and has taken a role as a small unit squad leader responsible for leading some of the newer recruits to GI Joe.
